ABSTRACT

The invention provides a method for implementing an electronic program guide. The method comprises partitioning a data storage area into a plurality of discrete storage areas; receiving programming information from a source; and storing the received program information, in its entirety, in the discrete storage areas, each discrete storage area storing programming information that is related in accordance with a predefined criterion.